

20 Tips for Effective Project Status Presentations with PowerPoint

Your project status presentations are important messages that you need the project team, resources, sponsors, customers, and others to understand and take action on. Too often, project status presentations contain PowerPoint slides full of paragraphs and complex visuals that leave the audience confused. If your presentations aren't as clear and compelling as you want them to be, use the tips in this e-book to improve the effectiveness of your presentations. Each tip includes a before and after slide makeover example so you see exactly how the tip applies to a slide from a project presentation. The tips are practical and you can apply them immediately to improve your presentations. The tips cover how to use a stoplight dashboard as an effective executive summary when presenting to a Steering Committee or Sponsors, how to organize the discussion of project scope, how using a table can make the evaluation and selection of one option over others easier to understand, a better way to present your team than just listing names, visual ways to show how work is progressing in the plan and what is coming next, how to explain complex system or process diagrams so they are easier to understand for the audience, and much more. Purchase this e-book right now and be creating more effective project status presentations using PowerPoint today.
