

Journal of a Voyage in Baffins Bay and Barrow Straits in the Years 1850-1851: Performed by H.M. Ships Lady Franklin and Sophia Under the Command of ... Library Collection - Polar Exploration)

In the mid-nineteenth century, British Arctic exploration was focused on the search for the missing expedition of Sir John Franklin. Physician and geologist Peter Cormack Sutherland (1822-1900) served as surgeon on William Pennys 1850-1 search expedition, which was instructed to concentrate on Jones Sound, Wellington Channel and Barrow Strait in the Canadian Arctic. Sutherlands illustrated eyewitness account, first published in two volumes in 1852, tells of appalling weather conditions, notes the hazards of navigating icy seas, describes the wildlife and geology of the region, and offers observations on the Inuit. Sutherland also recounts the poignant discovery of Franklins winter quarters at Beechey Island and the graves of several of his crew. Franklins fate, however, was yet to be discovered. Volume 1 covers the journey from Aberdeen as far as Barrow Strait. Sutherlands records here the many perils of the Arctic winter.
