

The God that Cried Wolf: and the Dangers of Make Believe

I wrote this book because I, like most people in this world have been bombarded with religion my whole life. There are crosses everywhere we look, anti-vaxxers using religion to justify their dangerous conduct, Jesus peddlers knocking on our doors, politicians spouting ridiculousness and influencing our laws, as well as family and friends forming conclusions based on a diluted version of reality. This book is a laymens attempt to take a comprehensive and critical look at religion and superstition in our world. We know too much. Advancements in our understanding of science and history are fundamentally incompatible with the myths that are propagated by todays religions. This book conclusively demonstrates why we must let go of the childish fables of the world. Taking an irreverent and sarcastic tone, The god that Cried Wolf clearly demonstrates why all religions and superstitions draw false conclusions about how our world functions. It will be best received by those people whom already have a skeptical mind. However if this book is read entirely from cover to cover, any religious or superstitious person will be able to clearly see why they can no longer put stock into their particular myth. It also illuminates why religious and superstitious moderates help perpetuate and provide security for the extremists. This book is a call to action for everyone to start living in a rational and logical state of being. The intent is to create a world without frivolous and dangerous forces which bear no validity and to remove these fraudulent influences from causing the many poor behaviors people carry out in the name of their particular religion. If a person honestly and actually reads this book with an open mind in its entirety, they will no longer be a believer in god, religion and superstition by the time they finish reading it. About the Author I am a photographer; writer, painter, actor and Ive been a producer and vocalist in a band called Bad Fathers for 15 years. I decided last year in March 2013 I could no longer sit by watching the religious ramble harmfully at the people on earth about their hybrid fantasies. I set out to write a book that would show any religious person why their thoughts are flawed and why they should move on to a high brow view of religion and the world we live.
