

The Long Pullbacks Strategy (Connors Research Trading Strategy Series)

The Long Pullbacks Strategy Do You Like To Trade Pullbacks? In 2005, we published what we consider to be our most powerful short-term trading strategy, now known as The Long Pullbacks Strategy. Many thousands of traders learned the strategy and many still use it today. Now we have updated and improved the strategy, added new entry parameters (including day trading parameters), added new exit strategies, and have updated the trade results from 2001 through 2011 for you to begin trading immediately. Strong Results What you will learn with this strategy are many hundreds of short-term set-ups which have been correct from 72.4% up to over 78% for more than a decade. And the average gain per trade (this includes all winning and losing trades) has averaged over 5.7% a trade on dozens of variations of the strategy. If you rely on data, not opinion, to make your trading decisions, and you want the ability to choose the best pullbacks to trade your strategies, then this guide is for you. Here are the test results for the top 20 best performing variations of the Long Pullbacks Strategy. As you can see the average gains per trade range from 5.73% per trade to up to 6.75% per trade for the past 11 years. Test Results for The Long Pullbacks Strategy from January 2001-December 2011
