Dadz & Popz 4 Kidz - Growing Together! Bridging the Generations A book by Peter Alford We are in an era in which our kids plug their heads into different, sometimes negative, constructed realities (video games, movies etc). Lets try to interface our children with the here and now instead of someone elses head space. Dadz, Popz and Kidz provides ideas, knowledge of and advice in sharing experiences which have the capacity to build relationships between generations. In a way, this book may assist in solving relationship and behaviour difficulties before they begin. It is not psycho babble, nor a recipe for bringing up children or necessarily solving all problems in this area. Dadz, Popz and Kidz encourages the most important and basic commodities that any grand/parent can give their child(ren), love and time. Unfortunately, but by necessity, being time poor has become a reality for some grand/parents. There is guilt that caring is diminished by this. However, it is what is done during the time spent together that is of great importance. Dadz, Popz and Kidz provides ideas for the use of that time. This book is based on the observation of parenting and grand-parenting of thousands of children over a forty year period. It is a different slant on sharing activities in that it doesnt need a ticket or coupon to ride. It may be a reminder to readers of the things they could have done as children but have subsequently forgotten to do with their own. Starting at birth and concluding at puberty Dadz, Popz and Kidz, it is hoped, will assist in building strong bonds between grand/parents and children that will last a lifetime. Peter Alford
