

One Evening in London

Angela is a newly published author at a book party celebrating the launch of her premiere book. She has been in bad relationships before and is skeptical about entering another. Paul is the publicist for her publishing company. His marriage is on the rocks, but he is a faithful man, continuing to respect the institution despite his wife's infidelities. The attraction is apparent between the two, but before the night is over both will learn a little bit more about race, the boundaries of love and human nature. This timeless love story comes in trade paperback featuring the couple on the cover and on the back a synopsis of the story against a London Bridge sunset backdrop.
