

This Man Thatacus Murphy

Sheriff Thatacus Murphy would rather deal with a jail full of drunks, would rather fist-fight Big Buck, and would rather be the innocent victim of someone else's vendetta than deal with the beautiful Katie Thomas. Ever since she arrived in town, stages got robbed, snakes appeared out of nowhere, and knife-wielding lunatics grabbed young boys by the scruff. If by some crazy event Katie wasn't convicted of felony and murder by the circuit-judge, Murphy would personally cart her lovely little self over to the stage depot and ship her out on the next outbound coach. Katie knew she was innocent of robbing the stage, even if she couldn't remember the event in a clear-like fashion. But she knew she wasn't the type of girl to kill people for money. She wasn't some black thundercloud like some folk thought she was - some folks by the name of Sheriff Thatacus Murphy that she could mention but she wouldn't. But how in the blue-eyed world was she going to convince the sheriff that she was innocent when the men who started this whole hullabaloo in the first place break her out of jail?
