

The Bondservant: a RAD novel

Blond, blue-eyed Austin Pettigrews life began in a petri dish, wanted only for his stem cells. Rejected and ignored, his infant need for emotional bonding was denied and resulted in Reactive Attachment Disorder (RAD). Life, as he knew it, ended when he disappeared on his sixteenth birthday. His missing persons file in Toronto was never closed and never solved. Only three people cared: his sister, whose life was saved by his existence, the housekeeper who know more than she let on, and the man whose job it was to find him. Several years later a retired PI finds Austins name in a Bible in Victoria, B.C. The First Nations boy who has the Bible claims Austin Pettigrew is dead. How does he know and where did he get Austins Bible? Other people were concerned. A ministry began in Victoria with one goal, to provide Bondservants who would bond with RAD kids and guide them into a healthy emotional life. No one had any idea how successful their ministry would become and the one who searched in Ontario realized the answer to his prayers.
