

Staring at Ceilings: A Young Mans War Against Cancer

Imagine a quiet Sunday afternoon sitting on the sofa watching your favourite soap. The only interruption is a phone call, a phone call destined to change your life. Jonathan (aged 20) has back ache, can you collect him from university? Drive him home? He needs to see a doctor. Forty-eight hours later, Jonathan is told that he has leukaemia (cancer of the blood) - over 90% of the cells are cancerous. The outlook is not good - treatment must begin immediately. The turbulent rise on the roller coaster of emotions begins.
