

The Player: The Life of Tony O'Reilly

One of Ireland's top rugby players, by the age of 25 he had also become the youngest ever head of a State Corporation in Ireland, where he launched the highly successful Kerrygold brand of butter. At 37 he was president of HJ Heinz in Pittsburgh, which he turned into one of the brightest stars of the American corporate scene. Now one of the world's most charismatic, versatile and powerful business tycoons, he has private interests ranging from supermarkets to newspaper groups.
